

Women's March Photos, Cambridge 2018

Had a great time at this year's women's march...Much good cheer; great signage, and a wide range of participants. At about 2 pm, half-way through, a police officer told me that the crowd estimate was 4000...but he believed the number of participants was twice that, and I'd guess even a few more. (Given that there were only about 10 porta-potties, I'd also guess that was many more than the organizers expected). The sound system left something to be desired (from my perch on a monument, I could see the speaker but not hear an understandable word) but I much enjoyed the creativity of the signage and enthusiasm of the attendees.

—Anita Harris

Anita M. Harris is a writer and communications consultant based in Cambridge, MA. She is the author of Broken Patterns, Professional Women and the Quest for a New Feminine Identity and Ithaca Diaries, Coming of Age in the 1960s.

New Cambridge Observer is a publication of the Harris Communications Group, a pr and content marketing firm in Cambridge.

This slideshow requires JavaScript.